MIDDLESTEIN IN THE MIDDLE

Growing up in The Bronx in New York, Thom Middlestein idolized Vincent and the Empire as he began his path towards the DBL in Middle School intramurals. He even wore homeade uniforms, both home and away, to practice.

"Everyone in my school would snicker as I walked in the gym. Looking back on, I can see why. I even spelled 'Vincnt' wrong. Haha. But I was enamoured with dodgeball at a young age. And I knew the joy I felt watching the Empire win in 2009 could come again with my own victories." - Middlestein

In highschool, he turned heads not only from university dodgeball programs, but baseball programs as well. The Sunshine City Rays were on him since 10th grade. He had the fastest fastball in the east coast.

"Baseball was never really for me, just something to do in the spring. All the strikeouts weren't that satisfying. To be honest, it was too easy. The real intrigue was trying to hit someone, who knew you were trying to hit them, and in addition they would turn around and try to hit you back. It was much more gladiator like for me."

And no matter what they offered, Middlestein chose to stay on the dodgeball track, and chose the upstart program of Bronx Academy to stay close to home. He became the recruiter for the team before he even played a game for them.

"I would talk to my rivals after States, Nationals, and All-Stars, trying to convince them to start something on our own. Make a legacy. But obviously, they wanted much more shine on the national stage. So, the first few years were pretty tough, it was practically 1 on 5 when we went against powerhouses like SSC and the Pentagons."

And this struggle is what made Middlestein bust out senior year capturing Thrower of the Year for the NCDL. He followed that up with a Combine winning performance, especially in the Throws and Bench, of course.

"On draft day, I knew I was going to be the face of one of the expansion teams. I told my mom, 'Here we go again!'"

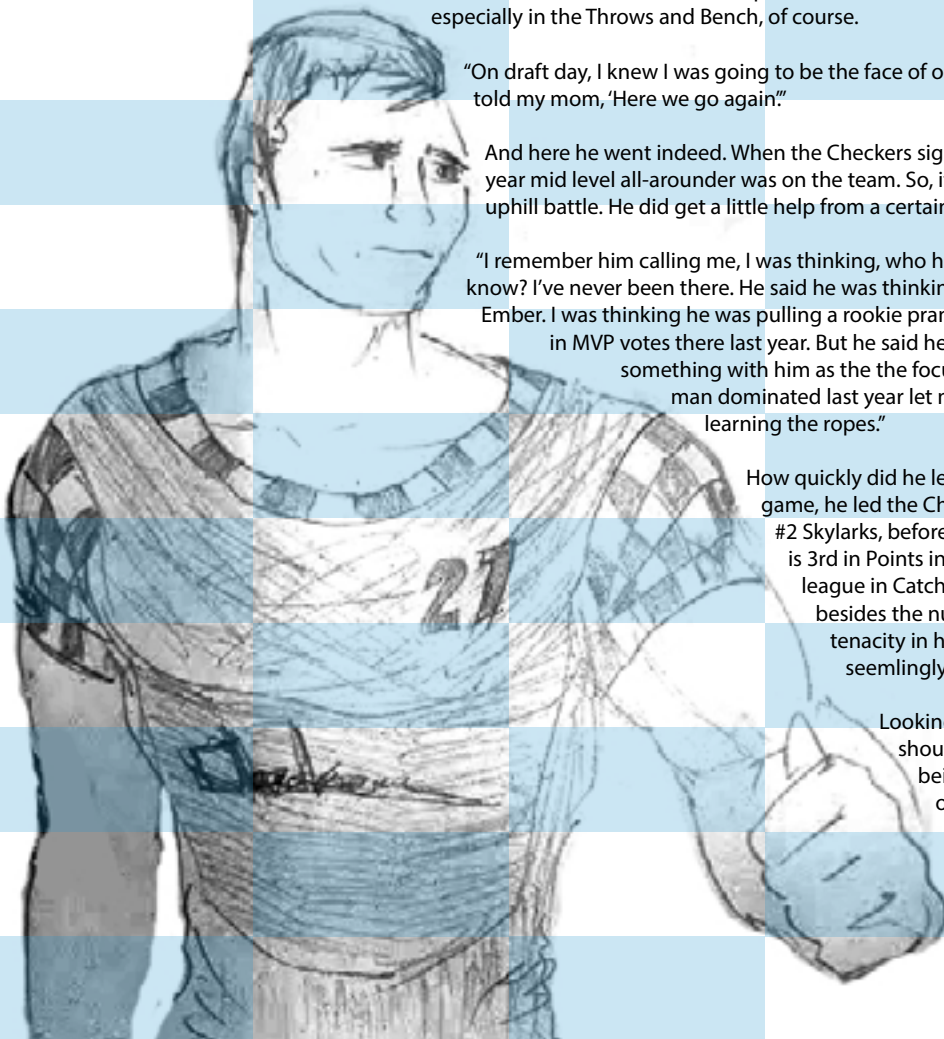

And here he went indeed. When the Checkers signed him, only J. Soto, a 2nd year mid level all-rounder was on the team. So, it was clear it was gonna be an uphill battle. He did get a little help from a certain Swede.

"I remember him calling me, I was thinking, who has a Nebraska area code that I know? I've never been there. He said he was thinking about leaving the Scarlet Ember. I was thinking he was pulling a rookie prank on me, because he was 2nd in MVP votes there last year. But he said he always wanted to build something with him as the the focus. I was game! The way this man dominated last year let me know I'd be in good hands learning the ropes."

How quickly did he learn! In his first regular season game, he led the Checkers to a 3-0 lead against the #2 Skylarks, before succumbing to a 3-5 loss. He is 3rd in Points in the league and leads the league in Catches. The most impressive thing besides the number was just the sheer tenacity in how he faced a juggernaut, seemingly alone.

Looking at his history, the Checkers should not worry about this man being able to carry an overlooked team, he has done so his whole life to this point.

Week 1: Very encouraging win from the Cat's. They played as a team and Jared and Ausonio showed they have a lot left in the tank for this season. Rival Toros hope not.

Week 1: Wow, what a game. The Checkers showed they can get on a roll. T. Middlestein has Carolina grinning, knowing they have a keeper that works into the night to get a very improbable victory.

Week 1: The Empire were spread pretty thin but came off with the victory thanks to solid play down the stretch from Thompson. Facing the Dizzy Devils next week will show where this team really ranks, it surely isn't #11.

The Diamonds are in great form coming into the 2nd Week to face nemesis Pharaohs. Charlie and the Win Phactory need to play with a little more urgency now that they are playing a caliber team. Look for an oddly one-sided game, from either side.

Very excited about this game. The Empire are still a big question mark. Same could be said of the Dizzy Devils. This game will let us know which team is the true #2 in the North... for now. Look for the Empire to have much better chemistry this game. It'll be all on McFadden to stop the onslaught of throwing prowess this team has.
